Category C1 covers

Car or van not in excess of 3.5 tonnes towing a trailer in excess of 750kg gross vehicle weight

Do you need B+E?

If you passed your category B (car) test after 1st January 1997 and want to tow a trailer, horse box or caravan weighing over 750kg gross vehicle weight on the UK's roads, you'll need to obtain the accompanying E (trailer) entitlement. Without this, your licence won't be valid to tow the above vehicles.

If you are looking for quality and affordable B+E training, car and trailer training in Surrey and the surrounding area, look no further than EP Training to help you achieve your trailer entitlement.

DVSA approved instruction

Our team of fully qualified and DVSA approved instructors will guide you through your training from start to finish, ensuring you have all the practical training and knowledge to pass your test confidently and with ease. Our staff members have many years of experience under their belt and are on hand to answer any questions or concerns you have.

Provisional B+E

Automatic Provisional BE Entitlement Passing your car test (cat B) will give you BE provisional entitlement automatically. As BE is not a vocational licence you need not complete a medical, pass theory tests or even complete the Initial Driver CPC qualification. All of our training is conducted from our Great Bookham facilities, near Leatherhead, which are endorsed by a number of leading training bodies including the DVSA, OCR and SQA.

Trailer training

Our B+E training in Surrey is both comprehensive and value for money. Our instructors will teach you everything you need to know and will adapt the course to suit your needs, taking into account any experience you may already have.

Your car and trailer test will take place at our local LGV test centre in Guildford, Surrey. Like us, they too have off road facilities and this is where you will conduct those well practiced manoeuvres. The test lasts for approximately 90 minutes and you will be out on the road with the examiner for about an hour. Once back at the test centre, you will be asked to complete a few more moves such as uncoupling the trailer, just as we've shown you during the training.

Whether you are an individual looking for one to one tuition, or a company looking to train several staff members, we can help. Contact us today for further information or to book one of our courses.
